Ozonated water is a form of water that has been oxidized with ozone gas. It has a fresh, clean taste with a light scent. In scientific studies, it has been shown to kill bacteria and viruses, including E. Coli, yeasts, salmonella, and listeria. When ingested, ozone adds oxygen to the bloodstream, reducing inflammation and strengthening the immune system, helping to fight off infection. Drinking cold ozonated water on an empty stomach regularly also helps to detoxify your digestive tract.

Due to its disinfecting properties, it is often used as a supplemental treatment for cancer patients. It helps to convert toxic wastes into water and carbon dioxide expediting their release from tissues, neutralizing the harmful effects of toxins that co-create an environment in which cancerous cells thrive.

Ozonated water has been found to be effective in treatments for wounds, sores and fungal infections. Conditions such as athlete's foot, ringworm, nail fungus, acne, and other skin disorders improve with ozone baths. Ozonated water provides gentle effective cleansing and is used during surgeries to keep open areas sterile. For chronic sinus issues, using a sinus rinse with ozonated water helps to reduce and prevent infections.
